Nineteen thirty nine dawns with television for the masses as its most predictable forecast. Lots of rumors flying back and forth. But they're still only rumors. One huge radio network is reported almost ready now to announce its visual broadcasts on nation-wide scale. Others in New York and Hollywood claim to be close to the solution of its problems. Yet many experts in broadcasting and in receiver manufacturing still maintain that widespread use of television is years away.

Best refutation to rumors that Dorothy Lamour and Orchestra Leader Husband Herbie Kay are separating is that their theatres as soon as their respective working schedules permit. That doesn't sound like they're divorce minded, does it?

"Lights Out" has just finished five years of mystery, murder, melodrama. And it's still the favorite show of many famous artists including Walter Huston, Boris Karloff and Gracie Allen—Ripley it or not.

So enthusiastic are jitterbugs who attend Benny Goodman's swing broadcasts that control engineers have a tough time keeping their belated idolatry from knocking the radio stations off the air. All of which gives you an idea of how seriously alligators take their music.

A move to present a Nobel Peace Award to John J. Anthony, director of the Original Good Will Hour, for his efforts "in behalf of an enlightened humanity on the road to peace," has been launched in New York by a committee headed by Harry Davis.

Daughter," and her little nephew were promenading when they came upon two urchins scuffling in the muddy gutter. "Why do kids like to get so messy?" wondered Miss Gerson. "Aw, they're angels with dirty faces," opined the nephew.

Recently both Bob Benchley and Al Jolson announced they'd stop staging previews of their broadcasts. They feel that a comedian gives his best performance of any show only once and if he does that at the preview then he's stale before time for the actual broadcast. But, on the other hand, Eddie Cantor insists the previews help him. His script starts out at over eighty pages all of which the preview studio audience hears. He studies their reactions carefully and then cuts more than half of his script keeping for the broadcast only those gags and situations which pleased the preview audience most. So, like any other discussion, there're two sides to this one.

Add Odd Occupations: Janice Gilbert, who is the baby in "Her Honor, Nancy James." Crying babies are Janice's specialty. She can cry in all styles and degrees, whimper, scream or just plain yell.

Radio receivers of the future will be actual articles of furniture fitting harmoniously into the style and decoration of the home rather than being simply a box or console which matches nothing, according to Prof. Peter Muller-Munk of the Carnegie Institute of Technology. Prof. Muller-Munk, foremost industrial designer of the country, has among his successes Fred Waring's new de luxe mixer which churns everything from meat to martinis.

Among the radio shows being renewed this time of year are the Don Ameche-Charlie McCarthy offering which is contracted for another fifty-three weeks; the Sunday Bandwagon, Good News and Little Orphan Annie for another year and the Hour of Charm for an added thirteen weeks. Although new shows being planned for early airing bring to radioland such stars as Walter O'Keefe, Cary Grant and Carol Lombard almost all of your present favorites will remain on the air.

The cast of the Star Theatre radio show has adopted as mascot the two-week-old baby of Jimmy Wallington. "I hope that doesn't mean we'll have to take turns diapering the baby," growled Ned Sparks. "Not any more than it means he's got to smoke your cigar," riposted Jimmy.

Travelogue For Life

BY MARTHA B. THOMAS

"I've just had a thought,"
said Marcia, "and it's a grand one."
They were tucked cozily beneath a bear rug in an old-fashioned sleigh, gliding along under the stars to the silvery jangle of bells.

"Tell me at once," commanded Jerry, "I collect grand thoughts as a hobby."
Marcia laughed. "Tonight is New Year's eve, and if," she sat up straighter in her eagerness, "the sun were shining, and we were going with it, just as fast, I mean—
we could yell down Happy New Year to the whole world as we rolled along!"

Jerry was amused and indulgent.
"Don't you see," continued the girl "we're all so used to thinking of events happening just where we are,
and not following
them on and on
The idea
rather gets you."

"Around the world in 24 hours
at New Year's.
A zippy travel-
logue?"

But she was serious. "See
here, Jerry, you
and I are going to be married
soon, and I sort
of hope we can,
well, keep our thoughts up and off
the ground."

"What an odd idea. Usually coming brides are chattering of linen and silver."

She pressed her hand on his arm.
"Stop the horse a minute, please.
There—let's both lean back and look up at the sky, and fill our eyes with stars, and space . . .
and time-going-on. Maybe, if we drink deep enough," her voice was hunky with feeling, "we won't get all tangled up with trifles. I'm a little afraid sometimes, of our days ahead, Jerry."

"Afraid?" The man's voice
sounded hurt.
"Only that I'll get a habit of daydreaming."

AT LONG LAST

"You mean," Jerry leaned over to take her hands "you want always to remember that new happiness, new ways of thought, and New Years, go ringing around the world with the sun; that time does not circle around one small set of people or circumstances?"

"Yes, yes, Jerry! Let's make a pact together, now. Not to think little thoughts about little events
that happen to our little selves."

"Fine. I'm with you!"

"And to remind each other now and then, to stop, and get the true sense of time and space and world-bigness going on and on."

"Done, darling! New Year's resolution for a happy life: KEEF
THE SUN, MOON AND STARS IN YOUR THOUGHTS . . . and you'll never be narrow-minded!"

Jerry kissed her.
"Hear the bells ringing in town?
Aren't they far and sweet?" whispered Marcia. "Midnight circling the world. New Year's in a minute!"

The SNAPSHOT GUILD

A NEW CAMERA YEAR

Progressing—moving upward into the light—this striking picture could well symbolize the serious camera hobbyist today.

HOW much did you learn about picture-taking in the past year?
How much will you learn in the New Year we are now entering?

This is a splendid time to take stock of yourself, examine your camera progress, make plans for the future. Could the figure on the staircase above symbolize you? Are you standing still—or are you moving upward into the light, reading more about picture-taking, studying your pictures, taking more, and constantly trying to improve?

Much of value is being written
these days about taking better pictures. Simple, practical handbooks about photography are readily available. Photo magazines contain much useful information. Manufacturers of cameras and film offer dozens of free pamphlets—not advertising,
but practical instruction booklets.
Every camera hobbyist should avail himself of these aids, for wider knowledge helps one make better pictures.

Is it your habit to study light and shadow—not just when taking a picture, but in everything you see?

Light and shadow are the substances of which photographs are made. Observe them, compare their variations in morning and evening,
on sunny and hazy days—and you will learn much about finding pictures that please the eye.

What do you know of color filters
—the little devices which, slipped over a camera lens, account for many of the striking "effect" pictures one sees today? Have you studied the simple rules of composition that help you arrange pictures so much more pleasingly? Inexpensive, elementary books on how to make good pictures explain all these things in a manner that any picture-lover can understand.

Why not make the new year a period of study as well as of picture-taking? Broad knowledge is not needed to get pictures, but it helps obtain pictures that are better, more pleasing, more satisfying. And today such knowledge is so easy to acquire!

New Year Cavalier

by Helen

FENTON DUMONT was bored with the party. All right welcoming in the New Year so snugly for people like these—but he was an adventurer, a cavalier, and the formal drawing room, the lovely ladies so ready to smile upon him, the classical music, the slow, pompous talk of the men suffocated him. He stepped to the balcony.

It had stopped snowing. In another hour the year would be dead. A grand year. But another would be beginning. He slipped over the balustrade, wound his leg around a pillar, and slid down to meet it. To the east, far away, the year was already new, and so he set off in that direction.

He was almost half way across the bridge before he noticed the girl, but then he strode quickly to her side. "Please don't," he said gently. She started. "I should only have to jump in after you, and can't you imagine how cold I'd be?" he ended, and shivered with shewn-like intensity. "I might even catch my death," he continued lightly, but the girl looked back to the river, and he realized his error. "You may want to die," he said earnestly, "but I don't. Please!"

"Then leave me be," she answered. Her voice was soft and musical, but passionately desperate.

He gathered her in his arms and kissed her. She struggled fiercely. He kissed her again, and again, pinning her arms to her sides with his strong clasp. And suddenly she went limp in his arms, and cried against his shoulder. He took off his overcoat and wrapped it around her, for she was shivering. "Why did you come off without your coat and hat?" he chided, and stroked her soft hair.

Behind him, bells and whistles proclaimed another year. "Happy New Year, lassie," he said gayly. She dried her eyes. "I'm being a fool," she apologized.

"Not at all," he answered, gallantly. "Methinks I behold a restaurant across the bridge. How about some coffee?"

She let him lead her, and he found a corner table. When their order had been placed, he turned to her.

"Why should you love a man like that?"

She looked up quickly, studying

him. "How did you know?"

"Why else should a lovely girl like you be spending New Year's eve that way? You should be dancing."

She smiled. "I don't know. It seemed terribly important half an hour ago. But I'm all right now. It doesn't matter any more."

"Off with the old," he quoted, "on with the new. This is the season for lovers as well as years. The old is off?"

"Yes."

He took her hand. "The new—would like very much—to be on." His gaze caught and held hers.

"May I take you home now?"

She nodded her thanks. Outside, it was snowing again, but they scarcely noticed. At her door, he kissed her, and this time she did not resist. "On with the new," she murmured gently.

"That's O.K. this time," he answered, "but I won't let it happen next New Year's."

HAPPY NEW YEAR MUSH

By Lueila B. Lyons

LEAH MERWIN had been the one elected to stay at home when the others went into town in the old flivver to the morning New Year's service at the church. Someone had to remain at home to watch the stock and, too, Leah hadn't a new or even a decent coat. Jake Merwin was having tough sledding in financial affairs without one more need being voiced, so Leah never told him of her need.

"I wouldn't have minded if it hadn't started snowing the minute their backs were turned and now—they won't tackle driving home in this weather," but Leah's words stopped at once as she made out in the swirling snow a car that was stopping in the barnyard. The plump figures of a man and a woman were making a wild dash for the protection of the house.

"We saw we couldn't go another turn of the wheels," the sweet, friendly woman told Leah—the lady who introduced the two of them as Mr. and Mrs. Tom Madison, 11 miles to the east of Bethel. "We hoped to spend New Year's and visit at our son's, Tom Junior's over at Bethel, but now—well, we want to buy our dinner here from you. May we, my dear, without putting you out?"

They were such a jolly pair and Leah even forgot to be embarrassed when she had to serve them the only thing she had prepared, a feast of delicious fried mush and butter and syrup and plenty of fresh milk and coffee. Supper consisted of the same fare and so did breakfast the next morning, but by that time the Merwins were able to break the drifts and reach the farm and the Madisons, via those breaks, went on their belated way.

"It will be a happy New Year every day for a year for us, Mommy," Leah shouted when the Madisons were out of sight. To a smiling but perplexed family, Leah explained that Mr. Madison owned a small chain of meat markets and small cross road grocery stores and that he had given her sufficient orders for slabs of cornmeal mush just like she had served him and his good wife, for all those stores for one year at least. "The labels on this mush, he said, are to read 'Lady Leah's Prize Mush.'" When the trio had quieted down a bit she added: "The money end of the contract will settle all our financial difficulties for the year and who knows, maybe forever!"

Beginning of the Year
As early as 251 B.C., the Romans accepted January as the beginning of the year. They named the month in honor of Janus, the two-faced god, as looking both into the past and the future. During the Middle Ages the year was made to begin at various dates. In England, in 1751, January was made the first month by act of Parliament.

Secret Order of the Apple
Several hundred Norman apple-growers recently organized into the Secret Order of the Apple, says a Rouen, France, correspondent. It has high signs, passwords and an official song; it stages colorful ceremonies when new knights are initiated into its mysteries; it also has an elaborate and impressive ritual, wherein the apple episode in the Garden of Eden is evoked, but Eve, instead of being blamed, is praised for eating the fruit which Adam offered her. Every Knight of the Apple must promise, on his honor, to be true to Normandy and to Norman products, particularly apples and cider.

RICH-MANN

The Universalist Church of West Paris, decorated with evergreens and white tapers, which added much to the dignity and simplicity of the occasion, was the scene of an attractive wedding on Saturday afternoon, Dec. 17, when Miss Gertrude Caroline Mann of West Paris became the bride of Odell C. Rich Jr. of Norway. Rev. Eleanor Bicknell Forbes performed the ceremony, using the double ring service.

The bride, who was given in marriage by her father, Edwin J. Mann, wore a dress of white slipper satin with train, her veil held in place with a coronet of pearls. She wore a necklace of pearls, a gift of the bridegroom. She carried a white prayer book with shower bouquet of lilies of the valley.

Her only attendant was her sister, Miss Edwina M. Mann, who was gown in a dress of royal blue net and chiffon velvet, with hat to match. She carried a colonial bouquet of sweetheart rosebuds. The ring bearer was Constance Elinor Mann, niece of the bride, who wore a burgundy chiffon velvet dress and carried the rings on a heart shaped white satin pillow. Clifford Lewis of Norway was best man and Lewis J. Mann, brother of the bride, was the usher.

Music was furnished by Miss Elizabeth Klein and Miss Marion Haskell, both of Norway. Following the wedding, a reception was held in Good Will Hall. The decorations were evergreens and poinsettias, with vases of white chrysanthemums.

Miss Frances Rich, sister of the bridegroom, was in charge of the guest book and gifts. Miss Eleanor Rich, another sister of the bridegroom, and Miss Edwina Mann served refreshments including a wedding cake.

The bride's gift to the bridegroom was a black cameo ring. Her attendant received a crystal pendant and chain, and the ring bearer a yellow gold locket and chain. The bridegroom's gift to his best man was a cigarette case and to the usher he gave a cigarette lighter.

The bride's travelling costume was of teal blue with burgundy accessories. They will reside in a newly furnished home at West Paris on their return.

Mrs. Rich is a graduate of the Maine Central Institute and Webber College of Boston, Mass., and Babson Park, Fla. She is also a member of the Universalist Church. Mr. Rich received his education in Norway and is a member of the I. O. O. F. lodge.

Last two weeks has returned to Carlton Saunders at West Bethel. Miss Florence Kimball is ill at this writing.

Bertrum Rugg is working in the woods at Stoneham.

And they shall teach no more every man his neighbour, and every man his brother, saying, Know the Lord: for they shall all know me, from the least of them unto the greatest of them, saith the Lord."
